For All Women-kind

It's time to see women differently. We put powerful women in front of and behind the camera, for a fresh look at how women see and express themselves in BELLA+CANVAS.

At BELLA+CANVAS, we've always seen things differently — and we're proud of it. In 1998, we entered a T-shirt industry centered around men, designed to fit their bodies. Tees for women were an ill-fitting afterthought. Men were the default, and we weren't here for it.

So we did something about it. We ditched the shapeless silhouettes and pioneered premium tees made especially for women, because we believe "One Size Fits All" fits no one. Then and now, we've proudly showcased our diversity and designed an array of styles tailored to fit a wide range of sizes. Our Female Edit celebrates our commitment to changing the status quo by uplifting all women — join us.
